LIFE IN HERTFORD DURING THE BOER WAR

1st Herts Volunteer Battalion on 17 May 1901, parading in the forecourt of Cowbridge Station

The British people felt tremendously patriotic when the Boer War broke out in 1899. They cheered the troops off to war, raised money for soldiers' families, and went quite wild in celebrating British victories. But then the war dragged on and the patriotic fervour quickly subsided. Philip will show how these events played out in Hertford during this time.
